Denver's Cheesman Park.

Contacted by The ENQUIRER, Alex said of the dinner: "It was me and four others who wrote letters and we all met at a coffee shop with some people from the White House.

"We were so nervous that we were meeting the most important man in the country and possibly the world. It was so exciting!

"We shook his hand. He had a very calming air about him. He was very chill. We were all put at ease within 30 seconds of the conversation.

"At (dinner) we just talked about the issues we wrote about."

When asked about introducing the President at the speech, Alex said: "My boyfriend got to come and shake the President's hand. And he did get to sit with me during the speech. (The White House) was very gracious and accommodating."

When informed that a photo had been snapped showing the President looking down her top, Alex did not respond.

Top New York City–based psychotherapist and body language expert Dr. Jamie Turndorf, author of "Kiss Your Fights Good-bye," examined the photo for The ENQUIRER and said: "It looks like he's been caught in the act!

"She's a very attractive woman and he appears to be fascinated with her chest.

"In addition, he has her in a very warm embrace. He's clearly infatuated, and the body language shows the embrace was tinged with sexual energy from him."

Sources tell The ENQUIRER the lewd incident is sure to be "the final humiliation" for the First Lady, who's fought bitterly with her horndog hubby over repeated acts of womanizing.

Confided a Washington, D.C., insider: "This will infuriate Michelle to no end – what he did was disgusting!"

Agreed a close source: "Barack's seemingly endless flirting, groping and womanizing have wrecked their marriage.

"This incident could trigger Michelle to divorce him – even before he finishes his second term!"
